

Sacha Bermudez-Goldman

Sacha Bermudez-Goldman was ordained to the priesthood on June 30, 2007.

Sacha joined the Society of Jesus in February 1999.

Originally from Nicaragua, Sacha moved to the United States for his secondary school and university studies. He did a Bachelors and a Masters in Engineering in Texas and worked as an engineer for a few years. He then joined an American missionary society and served as a lay missionary teacher for seven years in Tanzania (East Africa) and Cambodia.

During his first year after ordination Sacha was involved in Magis, the Ignatian young adult ministry as Victoria coordinator, and the Magis08 program for World Youth Day.

He was director of Jesuit Refugee Service Australia from August of 2008 until February 2011. After doing Tertianship (a 7-month Jesuit renewal program) in Salamanca, Spain, Sacha moved to Madrid and completed a Licentiate in Spiritual Theology in 2014.

He returned to Melbourne as superior of the Jesuit Community at Campion House and member of the Centre of Ignatian Spirituality there. He is currently completing his PhD in Spiritual Theology while living at Newman College and is also a lecturer at the Jesuit College of Spirituality.
