

Stephen Sinn

I am the son kneeling beside his parents at early morning mass at St Peter's Toorak.

I am the boarder at Xavier dislocated from home and wanting attention.

I am the student at Melbourne Uni not knowing who I was or what to study.

I am the teacher at St Ignatius' Athelstone umpiring at square leg, gazing at Black Hill.

I am the traveller, wandering the world, alone.

I am the priest walking down St Victor's corridor at the end of the day, listening to the breathing, snoring sounds of sleeping alcoholic men.

I presently live in The Bridge Community, Bathurst, a space for marginalised men to find their voice and direction.

I am loved and have loved.
